LONDON, Sept. 12.

THE Descent of the Duke of Ormond in the Bay of Cadiz being the most considerable Enterprize that the English have undertaken abroad for this last Hundred Years; We cannot doubt but the Publick will be better pleas'd with a Description of that Island and City, which may be of some use for the clearer understanding of the Advice that is come already and that is further expected from thence; than with any thing that we could draw out of the last Foreign Prints and News-Letters, even tho' we had not already given what is most material in them.

THE Island of CADIZ lies between the Mouth of the River Guadalquivir, and the Streights of Gibraltar, on the Coast of Andalusia: It is joyn'd to the firm Land by a Bridge of 700 Paces long, call'd la Puente de Suaco: The Distance between Port

St. Mary and that Bridge is about 12 Miles; from that Bridge to the City of Cadiz is likewise about 12 Miles: The Rocks call'd the Diamond and Los Pueros make the Entrance into the Bay pretty Dangerous: The Bay is about 12 Leagues in Circuit and 2 Broad; but the narrowest part (one Side of which is defended by a Fort call'd the Puntal, and the other by the Fort of St. Cruce,) is not above a Mile and an half over: That Part of the Island on which the Town stands is defended towards the Sea by the Fort of St. Philip, the Point of St. Sebastian, the Walls of the Town (which towards the Port are wash'd by the Tide), and by steep Rocks: And there are very Strong Fortifications to secure the Passage to the Town by the narrow Neck of Land that runs from the larger Part of the Island to the City: The Fort of St. Catherine which is taken by the Duke stands between Port St. Mary and the Bay. There are a great many Churches in Cadiz, which is well built, very rich, and full of Inhabitants.

Bristol, Sept. 9. Yesterday Captain Rice Commander of the Jeffreys Post-Boy arriv'd here and says, That in Company of two Merchant Ships of Bristol and one of London, he left the Island of Jamaica on the 7th of July, at which time they had heard nothing of a War; that after some days Sail he came up with a Merchant Ship that had Spoken to 3 Galleons, who told him that they were part of the Plate Fleet of 30 Sail, and that they had Orders to Sail directly for Cadiz. And that afterwards he came up with another Merchant Ship which left Jamaica on the 11th, who reported that Just as she came out a Sloop arriv'd from Barbadoes with Advice that War was proclaim'd in England, and that near Bermudas she had seen 30 or 32 tall Ships, but could not come up to distinguish what they were.

There are Two Mails wanting from Holland.
